The Kite on the Hill

Year 3 reading comprehension · Story · 11 marks · About 15 minutes

Maya had been waiting all week to fly her new kite. It was bright red with a long yellow tail, and her grandad had helped her make it.

On Saturday morning, the wind was perfect. Maya and her grandad climbed to the top of Windy Hill. “Hold the string tight,” said Grandad, “and run as fast as you can!”

Maya ran across the grass with her heart thumping. Slowly, the kite lifted from the ground. It wobbled, dipped and then soared high above the trees. Maya laughed out loud.

Suddenly, a strong gust tugged the string out of her hands. The kite swooped over the fence and landed at the top of an old oak tree. Maya’s smile disappeared.

“Don’t worry,” said Grandad, rubbing his chin. “I have an idea.” He tied a ball of string to a small stick and threw it over the branch above the kite. Together they pulled the string until the branch shook, and the kite slid gently down into Maya’s hands.

“Good thinking, Grandad!” she cried. From that day on, Maya always carried a ball of string in her pocket, just in case.
